

Cathy McLeod

Cathy McLeod has been dancing for a long time, starting with ballet lessons at age 5, and continuing through jazz and tap dancing in her teens, to Scottish country dancing as an adult. She gained her teaching qualifications in 1992, and has since done tutor training courses so that she is also qualified to train new teachers for exams.

She has been teaching regularly at her local Graceville club since 1996, currently with classes on Thursday mornings and Friday nights. She also helps teach the Branch technique classes in Spring Hill on Monday nights and taught a monthly children's class for many years when her own children were young. She has been an active member of the RSCDS Queensland Branch Committee, filling various roles over the years.

Cathy is keen to promote Scottish Country Dancing through encouraging and supporting beginners, children and trainee teachers. In recent years she has also led dance tours in Australia and overseas.

Cathy was presented with a Branch Award from Edinburgh in 2017.
